Valentina Petalosi

Selected work

Application to the MS in Strategic Design and Management, Parsons School of Design.

Rayuela	Public art
Deriva Collection	Brand management
Ana María Cosméticos	[Project type]
Jacarandas	[Project type]

About me

[Short introduction: background, what you do today, and why strategic design and management is the next step. Four to five sentences.]

Rayuela

Where	La Paz, Bogotá, Colombia
Funding	Museo Abierto de Bogotá grant, IDARTES · COP 38M
Role	Concept, design, budget and project lead
Team	3 artists I hired by open call, 3-person film crew
Timeline	Jan–Feb 2024 · 10 days on site

Women and girls don't use public space the way men and boys do, and they stop playing much younger. Rayuela turned half of the football court in La Paz, a stigmatised barrio born as an informal settlement, into 300 m² of play designed to bring them back.

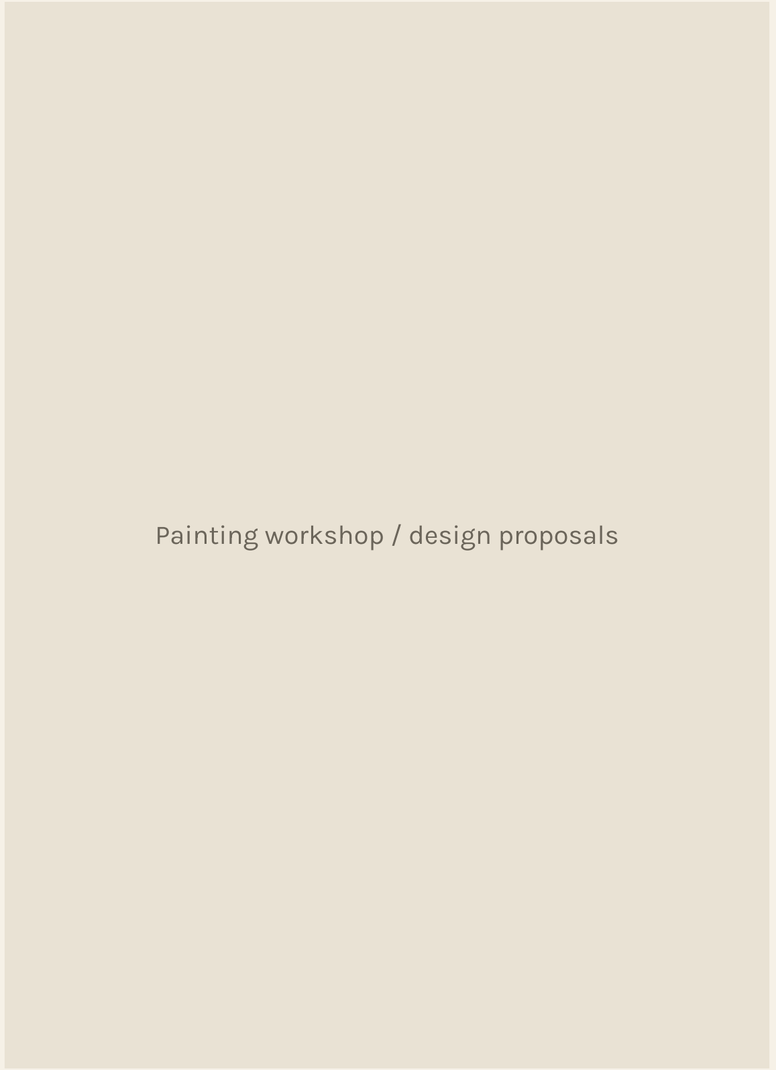

Public art · Participatory design

Rayuela

Designer & project lead · 2024

Listen. A play workshop with the neighbourhood's children mapped the games they already chalk on the ground.

Co-design. A painting workshop showed the colours and shapes they wanted. I drew two proposals and the community voted.

Build. Ten days of painting, planned around the daily rain, with water and power rented from neighbours' homes.

Girls playing on the finished court

Outcome

300 m²
of court painted with the community's design

COP 38M
public grant budgeted and executed

2 → 1
design proposals, chosen by community vote

7
people coordinated, plus a second team on the other half

Managing it meant postponed dates, a surface the paint supplier called unfit, and a shared court with another team. I learned to lock dates before committing money, and to earn neighbours' trust before the first coat.

Detail of the painted games